An Historical Overview of the Metropolitan M.E. Church Princess Anne, MD

The Church as an institution has played an important role in the lives of African Americans from the time of enslavement to the present. The slaves who worshipped from the balcony of the Saint Andrew's Episcopal Church in Princess Anne, Maryland were the original organizers of the Methodist Society in Somerset County. They later became the congregation of the Metropolitan Church. During the early 1800s, the slaves who attended services at Saint Andrew's learned about church polity. Preferring Methodist doctrines to the more "high church" Episcopal, those slaves left St. Andrew's and organized into a separate church, which was to become the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church.

The first mention of a separate church is found in the Somerset County Land Records (Liber G. H. No. 5, Folios 275 & 276), in which one acre of land was purchased for twenty-five dollars on 21 May 1830 from William Roach by a group of freemen in the county in order to form a Methodist Meeting House. These "free cullerd [colored]" men, Stephen Shephard, Abraham Handy, William Game, Henry Shephard, William Winder, Fraborn Allen, Ceasor Ker, James Ruce and Peter White became the first trustees of the church. The land, part of a tract called "Arcadia", was located near Princess Anne "beginning on the North side of the County Road and on the divisional line between… [William] Roach and … [James] Murry."

According to church histories, the slaves who had formerly worshipped at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church organized themselves in 1842 into a separate church and erected a frame building on the farm of Georgia Jones, naming it the John Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church. They worshipped there until 1860, when they started searching for another site on which to build both a church and a school. They had to settle for a property, owned by Hampden Deshields, which had been a cemetery and was located quite a distance west of town. A church, also named the John Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, and a school for blacks were constructed on the site. The black community worshipped there from 1861 until 1886.

As the membership of the John Wesley M.E. Church continued to increase, the building became inadequate to meet the needs of the members and the community.

The Delaware Conference (the charge to which the church belonged) gave permission to the church trustees (J.L. Dennis, Edward Dennis, David Cottman, Arnold Dennis,William H. Hayman, Jr., Sandy Bolding, Lazaurus Maddox, James P. Morris and Fredrick Maddox) to seek a new location on which to build a larger church. The congregation paid $400 to purchase land on Broad Street in the town of Princess Anne from Thomas Dixon on June 2, 1884. The lot, on which the church now stands, originally acquired in the 1740s as part of the County Court property, was once the location of the eighteenth century Somerset County jail and also, ironically, the location of the auction block where slaves had been sold. A travelling circuit minister named, Rev. Samuel Pancoast describes his 1851 visit first hand:

Selling of Slaves in Princess Anne, 1851

In a letter to The Peninsula Methodists of 22 April 1893, Rev. Samuel Pancoast (1819-1893) described a visit to Princess Anne in 1851, during which he witnessed the public sale of slaves.

> "I visited Princess Anne….in company with [Josephus Humphriss]' and on our way he told me there was to be public sale of slaves, in the court house. It was an administrator's sale, and the slaves were to be sold for the debts of their master. They were brought from an old jail to the court house, ten or more of them, men, women and children, some in their mother's arms, and sold separately; the mother first, and then the child. There were two classes of bidders, one wishing to buy them for their own use, and the other as speculators, to secure them for the more southern market. I noticed the slaves watched the bidders anxiously; and when the speculators were successful, I could see the large tear drops roll down their dusty cheeks; and when the sale was over, I saw them bid each other farewell at the jail door, doing so with great lamentation, and saying, "farewell, we shall never again see each other on earth."
> This harrowing scene was not allowed to continue but for a few minutes; those who were to go south being ordered to pass into the jail, and the others to go to the homes of their new owners. I never witnessed a scene that stirred my emotions of pity more deeply than that. I have learned that since those days of bondage have been succeeded by the day of freedom, the colored people have purchased that old jail, and erected on its site quite a large and elegant church, in which they now worship."

In 1885, the Reverend J. A. Scott, pastor of the congregation, obtained a loan from the Board of Church Extension to pay for the construction of a church building. Before laying the foundation, the land had to be cleared of the bricks from the old jail and the contractor, Daniel Collins, was paid $1,500. The members of the small congregation, most of whom were farmhands and domestics, struggled to make the annual payments of their loan. The cornerstone for the present church was put into place on September 19, 1886, when the church was officially named Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church. Church records indicate that the move from the "old" John Wesley to the "new" Metropolitan was completed in August 1887. The second Quarter Conference of the Delaware Conference was held at the church in September 1887. While financial struggles continued, in 1889 Rev. D. A. Ridout and the congregation were able to build a parsonage to go with their new church. Rev. Joseph Waters, the minister who built Metropolitan Church, also founded the Princess Anne Academy (now the University of Maryland Eastern Shore) on September 13, 1886 under the auspices of the Delaware Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

After the abolition of slavery, freed blacks continued to establish separate congregations and church facilities, creating communities and worshipping in culturally distinct ways. They had already created a unique and empowering form of Christianity that incorporated African spiritual traditions. The tradition of African Americans worshipping together in their own sanctuary continued throughout the late 19th century and continues to this day despite the dissolution of segregationist attitudes and the general acceptability of integrated worship. African-American churches have long been the centers of communities, serving as school sites in the early years after the Civil War, taking up social welfare functions, such as providing for the indigent and establishing schools, orphanages and prison ministries. As a result, black churches have fostered and built strong community organizations and provided spiritual and political leadership.

The statistical information which follows is from the microfilmed church records of the Maryland State Archives (MSA SC 2926 M1049). An electronic version is available on Special Collections Religion/Church Records CD #SCR73 at the Nabb Research Center. The records include church registers from Metropolitan and other churches listing births, marriages, funerals, probationers, church members and a variety of other church-related materials spanning the years from 1875 to 1967. The following transcription includes only a truncated portion of the birth, marriage and funeral records of the Metropolitan Church, as described below.

Entries in the original Marriage Registers include some, but not necessarily all, of the following: names of husband and wife; ages of both; birthplaces; place of residence at the time of marriage; previous marital status of each; occupation of the husband; date the marriage took place; place of marriage; and name of the person who performed the marriage. This transcription includes marriages from 1875 to 1912, the first name and surname of the bride and groom and their date of marriage. For ease of use, two alphabetical lists were made, one listing the grooms and one listing the brides. The information is the same on each, just in different order.

The entries in the original Baptism Registers include some, but not necessarily all, of the following: name of the individual; whether adult or infant; names of the parents; the place of the baptism; date the baptism took place, date of birth, and name of the person who performed the baptism. This transcription covers the years 1875 to 1914 and, when available, lists the surname and first name of the individual, date of baptism, date of birth, and names of the parents.

The original Funeral Registers list some, but not all of the following: name of the deceased, adult or infant, relatives (but not relationship); age of the deceased; place and date of funeral, and the minister who performed the funeral. The transcription covers the years 1929-1960 and lists the name of the deceased, the date of the funeral, the age of the deceased, and a relative.

While much (but not all) of the handwriting in the original records is legible, the spelling of names varies greatly from the modern-day spelling of the name. We have not attempted to correct or update the spelling, so when using this list, be sure to consider all possible spelling variations of the name which you are seeking.

Some of the names found in the transcription include Ballard, Dennis, Deshields, Doane, Handy, Hayman, Jones, King, Maddox, Morris, Nutter, Tilghman, Wilson, and Waters. Many of their descendants still make their homes here on the Eastern Shore. This compilation was undertaken in the hope that it will be a valuable tool in researching the family histories of members of the local black community.
